Athlete Status	Recreational Athlete
Sports / Activities	Running / Jogging • Fitness / Gym • Cycling • Triathlon
Available for Opportunities	Yes

Robert is a dedicated recreational runner, cyclist, and triathlete whose passion for endurance sports extends far beyond the finish line. With years of experience participating in athletic events and maintaining an active lifestyle, he has developed a deep appreciation for the discipline, preparation, and commitment required to succeed in endurance sports. His involvement in the athletic community has also opened the door to opportunities beyond competition, including serving as a Zoot Sports Ambassador from 2018 to 2026. Through this experience, Robert has gained valuable insight into athletic products, performance equipment, and the importance of connecting athletes with brands that genuinely support their goals.

Beyond his athletic pursuits, Robert brings an extensive professional background spanning aerospace, defense, space systems, and national security. His expertise includes enterprise operations, risk governance, and board-level advisory work, where he has focused on developing strategies that create scalable, sustainable, and long-term impact. This combination of strategic business knowledge and firsthand athletic experience gives Robert a unique perspective on the endurance sports industry. He understands not only the dedication required from athletes but also the importance of strong business relationships, innovation, and thoughtful decision-making in building successful organizations and partnerships.

Today, Robert is looking to combine his professional expertise with his passion for running, cycling, and triathlon by exploring the business side of endurance sports while continuing to compete recreationally. He is particularly interested in developing authentic partnerships with brands whose products he has personally used and understands, allowing him to contribute both as an athlete and an experienced business professional. Robert's journey reflects the idea that a passion for sports can evolve into opportunities for meaningful collaboration, professional growth, and lasting impact. By bringing together his athletic experience and strategic business background, he hopes to help bridge the gap between performance, innovation, and the business of endurance sports.
